FIRST REPORT

ON

SANSKRIT MANUSCRIPTS.

THE Government of Madras having ordered me to take up the search for Sanskrit manuscripts in the Southern Presidency, I thought it best to begin work in those districts from which no lists had been supplied to Dr. Oppert, and among these again selected the Nellore district on account of its proximity to Bangalore. My second Assistant, Mr. H. Krishna Sastri, was deputed to Nellore and examined 33 libraries during the months of August and September 1894. The result of his tour is a list of about 700 manuscripts with copious notes. He has done his work, which requires a great deal of tact, patience and knowledge, in a very satisfactory and conscientious manner. With the help of that monument of accurate scholarship, the fruit of thirty years' unremitting labour,—Dr. Aufrecht's Catalogus Catalogorum, I found it easy to identify, with very few exceptions, the works and authors described by Mr. Krishna Sastri. Extracts from his notes and an alphabetical index of works and authors are appended to the subjoined list of manuscripts.

Among the Vêdic books in the subjoined list are Telugu manuscripts of the Ṛigvēdasamhitâ, Ṛigvēdapada, and Yajurvēdapada.¹ A large number of manuscripts are connected with the Âpastamba and Âśvalâyana Sûtras, and a few with the Bhâradvâja, Bôdhâyana, Drâhyâyana and Gautama Sûtras.

Among the commentaries on the Âpastambasûtra is one by Guhadêvasvâmin (No. 414b). This may be the Guhadêva whose Vêdabhâshya is quoted by Dêvarâjayajvan.²

From Dr. Aufrecht's Oxford Catalogue (p. 371b) and Dr. Burnell's Tanjore Catalogue (p. 16a), we learn that Bukka II.,

the son of Harihara II.,¹ had by his queen Tipp[â]mbâ a son named Bhûpati, who is not mentioned in any inscriptions of the Vijayanagara dynasty, and that Bhûpati's minister Chaundapâchârya wrote a commentary on the Âpastamba-sûtra, entitled Prayôgaratnamâlâ. The subjoined list contains two copies of this work (Nos. 161 and 638), in the second of which the name of the author is given as Vishṇubhaṭṭa (Chaundapâyana). He is perhaps identical with that Chaundapâyana who composed a separate work on sacrifices, the Yâgakâlanirnaya (Nos. 428, 436, 606 and 652).

The last portion of the Kalpasûtras are the so-called Sulbasûtras, which contain directions for the correct construction of the various altars (vêdi) on which sacrifices are offered. Durbhâ Cheñchu Subrahmanya Dîkshita at Lêbûr, the owner of Nos. 135 to 180 of the subjoined list, has prepared elaborate drawings of these altars, showing the correct shape and position of each brick, on the basis of the Sulbasûtra of Âpastamba. I am endeavouring to induce him to let me publish these valuable drawings in the Indian Antiquary.

No less than thirteen manuscripts are attributed by their present owners to a teacher whose name is pronounced in various ways, but appears to have been either Âṇḍapilla² or Ândhrapilla. The second form of the name would mean 'the Telugu child' and would be a similar designation as Dravida-sîsu (i.e. 'the Tamil child'), a name which is referred to in Śamkarâchârya's Saundaryalaharî, and by which, as pointed out by Mr. P. Sundaram Pillai,³ we have to understand the great Śaiva teacher Tiruñânasambandar.⁴ Âṇḍapilla is the author of works connected with the Sûtras of Âpastamba, Âśvalâyana and Drâhyâyana. In the colophons of his works he calls

² Compare Âṇḍapillâ, Âṇḍapillâ and Âṇḍapillâpaddhati in Dr. Aufrecht's Cat. Cat. pp. 65 and 773b, and Âṇḍapillâ in Dr. Oppert's Lists of Sanskrit Manuscripts in Southern India, Vol. II. p. 680. A corruption of the name Âṇḍapilla forms the second portion of the titles of two other manuscripts, Âdhânânvillâ and Darîapârnamâsânvillâ, which are quoted by Dr. Aufrecht (Cat. Cat. pp. 455 and 246b).

himself Tâlavr̥ntanivâsin, i.e. 'an inhabitant of Tâlavr̥nta,' which may be a Sanskrit translation of Tiruppaṇḍâl (i.e. 'the sacred palmyra stalk'), the name of a village in the Tanjore district.

The subject of oblations to the manes according to the Sûtras of Âśvalâyaṇa (Nos. 150 and 418) and Bhâradvâja (No. 58) is treated by Yallâjibhaṭṭa, the son of Yallambhaṭṭa or Yallubhaṭṭa. He is evidently identical with the "son of Yallabhaṭṭa" to whom the Mysore Catalogue quoted in Dr. Aufrecht's Cat. Cat. (p. 56b) attributes a commentary on Âśvalâyaṇa.

Kṛishṇapaṇḍita, the son of Râma, is the author of the Saṁdhyânirṇayakalpavallî (No. 442) and of a Saṁdhyâvan-danabhâṣhya (Nos. 33, 151, 539 and 635). Another Saṁdhyâ-vandanabhâṣhya was written by Tirumalayajvan (No. 255b). Tirumalasômayâjin, the son of Purâṇa-Tirumalayajvan, composed a treatise connected with the Âśvalâyanasûtra (No. 413).

The colophon of No. 630 supplies the name of Sôma, the hitherto unknown author¹ of the Tribhâṣhyaratna, a commentary on the Taittirîya-Prâtisâkhyâ, which was published by the late Professor Whitney.

The Padadarpaṇa (No. 600a), a commentary by Mallayârya on the Padapañchaka, seems to treat of Vêdic phonetics. The Mysore Catalogue quoted in Dr. Aufrecht's Cat. Cat. (pp. 473a and 604a) calls this book "Vêdapadadarpaṇa by Yallayârya Yajvan."

Six manuscripts contain the Padayôjanâ, a commentary on the Bhagavadgîtâ by Râmachandra Sarasvatî (or Bhârâtî). At the beginning of his work, the author pays his respects to a number of teachers of the Vêdânta school,² acknowledges to have used three earlier commentaries (the Paisâchabhâṣhya, and those of Śaṁkara and Śrîdhara), and states that, before undertaking the present work, he had written a commentary on the Rāmāyana.¹ A portion of this other work of his is contained in No. 239, where however the author's name appears as Rāmachandrānanda Sarasvatī.

Two manuscripts (Nos. 137 and 229) contain a commentary on the Brahmasūtra, entitled Brāhmatattva-prakāśikā or -pradīpikā, which is not found in the published lists of MSS. The author is Sadāśivēndra Sarasvatī, a pupil of Paramasivēndra Sarasvatī.

Another commentary on the Brahmasūtra (No. 506) was composed by Paramānandaghana, who called it Chidānanda-brahmavilāsa after his preceptor, Chidānandabrahmēndra Sarasvatī. The same Paramānandaghana wrote the Prayōgaratnāvalī (Nos. 163, 611 and 615) and the Smṛitiratnamahōdadhi (Nos. 148 and 480). He bore the surname Brahmānanda Sarasvatī (No. 148), but is distinct from Brahmānanda Bhāratī, the pupil of Kṛṣṇānanda Bhāratī (No. 241).

The opening verses of a manuscript of the Vēdāntaparibhāṣā by Dharmarājādharīndra (No. 655) prove that Dr. Bunnell² is right in identifying the author of this work with the author of the Tarkachūḍāmaṇi. The same verses state that Dharmarājādharīndra wrote a commentary on Śāśadhara's (Nyāyasiddhāntadīpa) and another on (Pādapadmāchārya's) Pañchapādikā. The published catalogues of manuscripts do not contain the latter; but the first of them is referred to as "Nyāyaratna by Dharmarāja Bhaṭṭa" in Dr. Aufrecht's Cat. Cat. p. 311a.

A hitherto unnoticed treatise by Yatirāja, i.e. Rāmānujāchārya, is the Mūlamantrārthasāra (No. 464), which was composed at Śrībhūtapura, i.e. Śrīperumbūdūr near Madras. I take this opportunity for stating that Yādavāchala, which Rāmānuja visited, is Mēlukōte in Mysore.

The Guruparamparāprabhāva, a Tamil work printed at Madras,³ contains traditional accounts of the Vaishṇava saints

³ Kaliyuga 4990, the Virōdhi samvatsara. The existence of this book was made known to me by Mr. Venkayya.

(Ālvār),¹ of Rāmānuja, and of his successors. The most prominent of the latter is Venkaṭanātha Vēdāntāchārya or Vēdāntadēśika. A very long list of works which he is believed to have composed, is appended to the printed edition of the Guruparamparāprabhāva. Two of these works are the Pādukāsahasra,² a hymn in honour of Viṣṇu (Nos. 256a and 392), and the Hamsasaṁdēśa (No. 123). Nos. 398 and 546 appear to contain a poem composed by, or relating to, Vēdāntāchārya.

Nos. 471a and 595b contain the Vasantatilakabhāṇa, a drama by Varadāchārya.³ This author can be safely identified with the Vaiṣṇava teacher of the same name, who was the son of Dēvarāja of Kāñchī, and to whom the Guruparamparāprabhāva attributes the two surnames Ammâlāchārya and Ghaṭikāśatakam-Ammâl. The first of these two names appears in the form Ambâlāchārya in No. 595b, and a corruption of the second name is preserved in the colophon of Dr. R. Mitra's No. 116.

The concluding verses of No. 26 state that Subrahmaṇya of the Pondūri family, the son of Venkaṭēśa, wrote a commentary on the Abhinavashadaṣṭi, a work on dharma (Nos. 26, 122, 149 and 437). He is also the author of a commentary on the drama Prabōdhachandrōdaya (No. 282).

Another work on dharma is the Kaṇṭhabhūṣhaṇa (No. 603), a commentary on his own work Grihyaratna by Venkaṭanātha, surnamed Vaidikasārvabhauma, the son of Raṅganātha and grandson of Sarasvatīvallabha. The opening verse names the following works by the same author:—Āśaucaśataka, Pitrimēdhasāra, commentaries on these two works, Daśanīrṇaya, Grihyaratna, Ratnākara, and Vibudhakaṇṭhaviḥhūṣhaṇa, which is another name of the Kaṇṭhabhūṣhaṇa, Venkaṭanātha's commentary on his Grihyaratna. The title Ratnākara is an abbreviation of Smṛitiratnākara (No. 317). The Āśaucaśataka and Daśanīrṇaya by Vaidiasārvabhakuma are referred to in Mr. Rice's Mysore Catalogue, pp. 194 and 200. The Aghanirnaya by Venkaṭasārvabhauma (No. 619) or Vaidikasārvabhauma (Mr. Rice's Mysore Catalogue, p. 192) is perhaps a portion of Venkaṭanātha's Daśanirnaya.

² This production was commented on by Śrīnivāsadāsa (Nos. 256b and 555).

³ Another drama by Varadāchārya is the Chōḷabhāṇa (No. 262).

Annambhaṭṭa, the son of Tirumalāchārya (and author of the Tarkasamgraha), composed a commentary on Kaiyaṭa's Mahābhāshyapradīpa (Nos. 245c, 246 and 324), and Lakshmīnṛisimha a commentary on Nāgōjībhaṭṭa's Paribhāshēnduśekhara (No. 251).

Erṅamādhavārya, the son of Brahmabhaṭṭa, wrote a grammatical work called Tripadadyōtinī (No. 313). He was one of the Paṇḍits of Vīrapratāpa-Venkaṭadēva-Mahārāya. This must have been either Venkaṭa I. or II. of the third Vijayanagara dynasty.¹ Kandaḷayārya, the author of the Alaṅkāraśirōbhūṣaṇa (No. 371), and Appayadīkshita, the author of the Kuvalayānanda, also lived at the court of one of the two Venkaṭas.

No. 265 is a manuscript of a Prākṛit grammar, entitled Prākṛitamaniḍipikā and compiled from the works of Trivikramadēva, Hēmachandra, Lakshmīdhara, king Bhōja, Pushpavanānātha, Vararuchi and Appayajvan by Chinabommabhūpāla. This author was the minister of king Chokkanātha, 'the lord of the southern ocean.' By this one of the two Nāyakas of Madhurā who bore the name Chokkanātha, must be meant.

No. 143 contains an astronomical work, named Jyōtiṣhasamhitārnava, whose author, Sūnṛitavādin, was a protégé of the Gajapati king Pratāparudradēva of Orissa. The Sarasvatīvilāsa (No. 424) is attributed to the king himself.

Venkaṭayajvan of Kuṇḍinīpaṭṭaṇa, the son of Venkaṭa of the Chintalapāṭi family, is the author of two astronomical works, the Nirṇayakaumudī, which treats of the preparation of calendars, and the Uj्जvalā, a commentary on the Kālamṛita.

From the colophon of a manuscript of the Svaramēlakalānidhī (No. 573), a work on music by Rāmāmātya, we learn that it was composed in A.D. 1550, and that its author was the son of Tôḍaramallatimma, whom Dr. Aufrecht (Cat. Cat. p. 214b) identifies with Akbar's minister Tôḍar Mall (+ A.D. 1589).

Among the novelties are a commentary on Piṅgala's Metrics by Yâdavaprakâśa (Nos. 299 and 563), and a commentary on Kâlidâsa's Nalôdaya by Kṛishṇabhaṭṭa or Kṛishṇasûri (Nos. 17 and 242b).

The Virôdhahhañjant, a commentary on Vâlmîki's Râmâyana (Nos. 305, 375 and 583b), was composed by Brahma-vidyâdikshita, the son of Nṛisimha. The introductory verses of No. 375 allude to several philosophical works by the same author.

A manuscript of the Kâvyadarpana (No. 568), a rhetorical work by Râjachûḍâmanidîkshita, contains the following long list of other works by the same author:— A commentary on (Pârthasârathimîśra's) Śâstradîpikâ; Tantrasîkhâmani; Nyâyamuktâvali (?); commentaries on the Yajurvêda and on all Upanishads; Prâyâschittapradîpikâ; Nyâyachûḍâmani, a commentary on Ruchidatta's (Tattvachintâmaniprakâśa ?); Manidarpana, a commentary on three books (khaṇḍa) of the Mani (i.e. the Tattvachintâmani); a drama entitled Śṛiṅgârasarvasvabhâna; the missing 6th book (Yuddhakhaṇḍa) of the Bhôjachampû, which Râjachûḍâmani composed in a single day; Bhâratachampû; Vṛittaratnâvali; a biography (?) of his father Śrînivâsa; the stories (kathâ) of Raghuvîra (i.e. Râma), Kṛishṇa and the Pândavas;¹ Mañjubhâshinî, containing the story of Sitâpati (Râma); the poem (kâvya) Śaṅkarâbhyudaya; the poem Kaṁsavadha; Rukminyudvâha; the drama (nâṭikâ) Kamalinî-kalahainṣa; the drama (nâṭaka) Ânandarâghava; Alaṁkâra-śîrô mani; and Chitramañjarî. Of all these works only seven are mentioned in the published catalogues of manuscripts²:— Karpûravârttika (Śâstradîpikâṭikâ), Kâvyadarpana,

Tantrasikhâmani (Mimâṃsâsūtratīkā), Ānandarāghava, Kamalinīkalahansa, Rukminīkalyāṇa (Rukminyudvāha), and Vṛittaratnākaratīkā (Vṛittaratnāvali).

A poetical anthology, based on the drama Mahānātaka (No. 526), is attributed to a royal author, Immaḍidēvarāya. This king is probably identical with Dēvarāya II. of Vijayanagara, who is known to have borne the surname Immaḍi.¹

The authorship of a critical commentary on the Amaruśataka, entitled Śṛiṅgārādīpikā (Nos. 267c and 537), is ascribed to prince Kōmaṭivēma, whose uncle (?), king Vēma, is said to have built a flight of steps at Śrīśailam, the well-known Śaiva shrine in the Kāṇṇāl district. This statement enables us to identify him with Vēma, the son of Prōla, of the Redḍi dynasty of Koṇḍaviḍu, to whom the same achievement is attributed in two copper-plate inscriptions of Annavēma.² At the beginning of No. 537, Vēma is further said to have belonged to the Chaturthānvaya, i.e. to the Śūdra caste,³ and to have performed the gifts prescribed by Hēmādri, the author of the Dānakhaṇḍa.⁴

A native of Madhurā, Gōpālarāya, the son of Veṅkatēndra, wrote a commentary on the poem Rāmachandrōdaya (No. 469) and composed two dramas, the Śrīraṅgarājabhāṇa and the Śṛiṅgāramañjarībhāṇa, the second of which is referred to in the beginning of the first (No. 385).

No. 297 furnishes a genealogical table of a Brāhmaṇa family from Benares. The last descendant who is mentioned, Dharmasūri, composed a rhetorical work, Sāhityaratnākara. He is also the author of a drama, Narakadhvaṃsavayāyōga (No. 323) or, as it is called in Dr. Aufrecht's Cat. Cat. p. 277a, Narakāsura Vijaya.

The subjoined list contains two copies (Nos. 189 and 307) of the Ratnāṇa, a commentary on the rhetorical work Pratāparudrayaśōbhāṣaṇa. The commentator is Kumārasvāmi-Sōmapīthin, the son of the well-known Kōlachala-Mallināthasūri and younger brother of Peddayârya.¹ Though this commentary is accessible in printed editions, the European catalogues of manuscripts still perpetuate certain mistakes or misprints in Dr. Burnell's Tanjore Catalogue, p. 566, where the book is called Ratnârpaṇa, the author's father Kolâchala, and his elder brother Peddârya.²

Veṅkaṭa of Conjeeveram, the son of Raghunâtha and grandson of Appaya, is already known as the author of the curious poem Viśvagunâdarśa, which, as Dr. Aufrecht remarks, "will be very useful for the knowledge of the more recent history of the Dekhan" (Oxford Catalogue, p. 150a), and which, in the opinion of Dr. Burnell, is "almost the only modern South-Indian production that shows the least originality" (Tanjore Catalogue, p. 162a). From the beginning of No. 116 and the colophon of No. 396, both of which refer to Veṅkaṭa, his father Raghunâtha, and his grandfather Appaya, we learn that the same Veṅkaṭa is the author of two other poems, Uttararâmachampû and Lakshmîsahasra.

Kuravi Mallayya Śâstri at Inamanamellûr, whose library is described in the subjoined list (Nos. 548 to 573), is a descendant of a modern but fertile writer, named Kuravirâma, who is reported to have lived at the court of one of the Zamîndârs of Kârvêtinagaram in the North Arcot district. He is the author of commentaries on two well-known poems, the Champûbhârata of Anantabhaṭṭa (Nos. 214, 519 and 596) and the Viśvagunâdarśa of Veṅkaṭa (Nos. 21, 211 and 587). The opening verse of his commentary on the Viśvagunâdarśa states that he also wrote treatises on the two rhetorical works Daśarûpa and Kuvalayânanda. The library of his living descendant still contains a copy of the former work (No. 554), and besides, his Telugu translation of the Vâsavadattâ, entitled Vâsavadattâparinaya and written on 57 palm-leaves.
